Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Thursday 01 Apr 2021

UK Outlook for Tuesday 6 Apr 2021 to Thursday 15 Apr 2021:
Cold and unsettled to start this period, particularly at first, when snow and hail showers are likely just about anywhere. The north, west and eastern coastal areas seeing the most frequent and heavy showers on Tuesday. Some strong winds also developing for a time accentuating the cold feel. This general picture continues into much of April, with showers most frequent around the north and east. Any snow will most likely be restricted to higher ground of the north later. Towards the end of this period, however, mixed weather patterns begin to evolve meaning that although showers and longer spells of rain are still probable, some drier interludes are also likely. Temperatures are also likely to return to around average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.